Chapter 1 by The Book of Stories

Nobody knew her name.

Nobody knew her life.

Nobody knew her existence.

The poor little girl's life was swept away from this world, but no one knew.

The only evidence of her existence was a news report of a horrifying murder of the girl.

Shot in the chest seven times, and cut up into pieces.

That's what she felt like now, as she watched from above as her mother didn't as so much her own daughter's hair color.

The girl didn't deserve this. Nobody did.

So, God allowed the poor girl to recarnate into a newborn child, to replace her unfinished story.

A baby cry erupted from the newborn angel...

She was cradled in her new mother's tender touch, and a soft giggle escapes the child. She hopes that she will never be hurt again, and her new mother feels the same way. The baby was carefree and happy, until she remembers her old life, and it's tragic end.

As the new baby is named (Victoria Xia) and taken home in a lavish minivan, she sends her conscience up to God.

"Thank you," she manages. "Thank yo--." And she was sucked back to Earth.

As she grew, Victoria learned to walk, and to talk, and to play like other toddlers. But on her tenth birthday, Victoria grew something else, too.

Wings.

And with that, the Lord send the new angel her halo.
